

Executive Leadership Programs

- Each year URMC solicits nominations for candidates who identify as women from each of its schools (medical, dental, public health and pharmacy) for participation in the Drexel University Executive Leadership in Academic Medicine (ELAM) program:

ELAM Fellowship Purpose

Build a community of exceptional women academic leaders who have broad organizational perspectives and deep personal capacity to address emerging issues in their schools and universities, and the society they serve.

- This year URMC will also solicit nominations for participation in the Executive Leadership in Health (ELH) program as well

ELH Fellowship Purpose

Targets rising women who are established experts in their domain with a track record of achievement in clinical program development (or other institutional-level activities) and have aspirations to lead at the executive level in the next five years.

Executive Leadership in Academic Medicine - Drexel University College of Medicine